
TEAM 1 – AMAZON T LEVEL WEBSITE

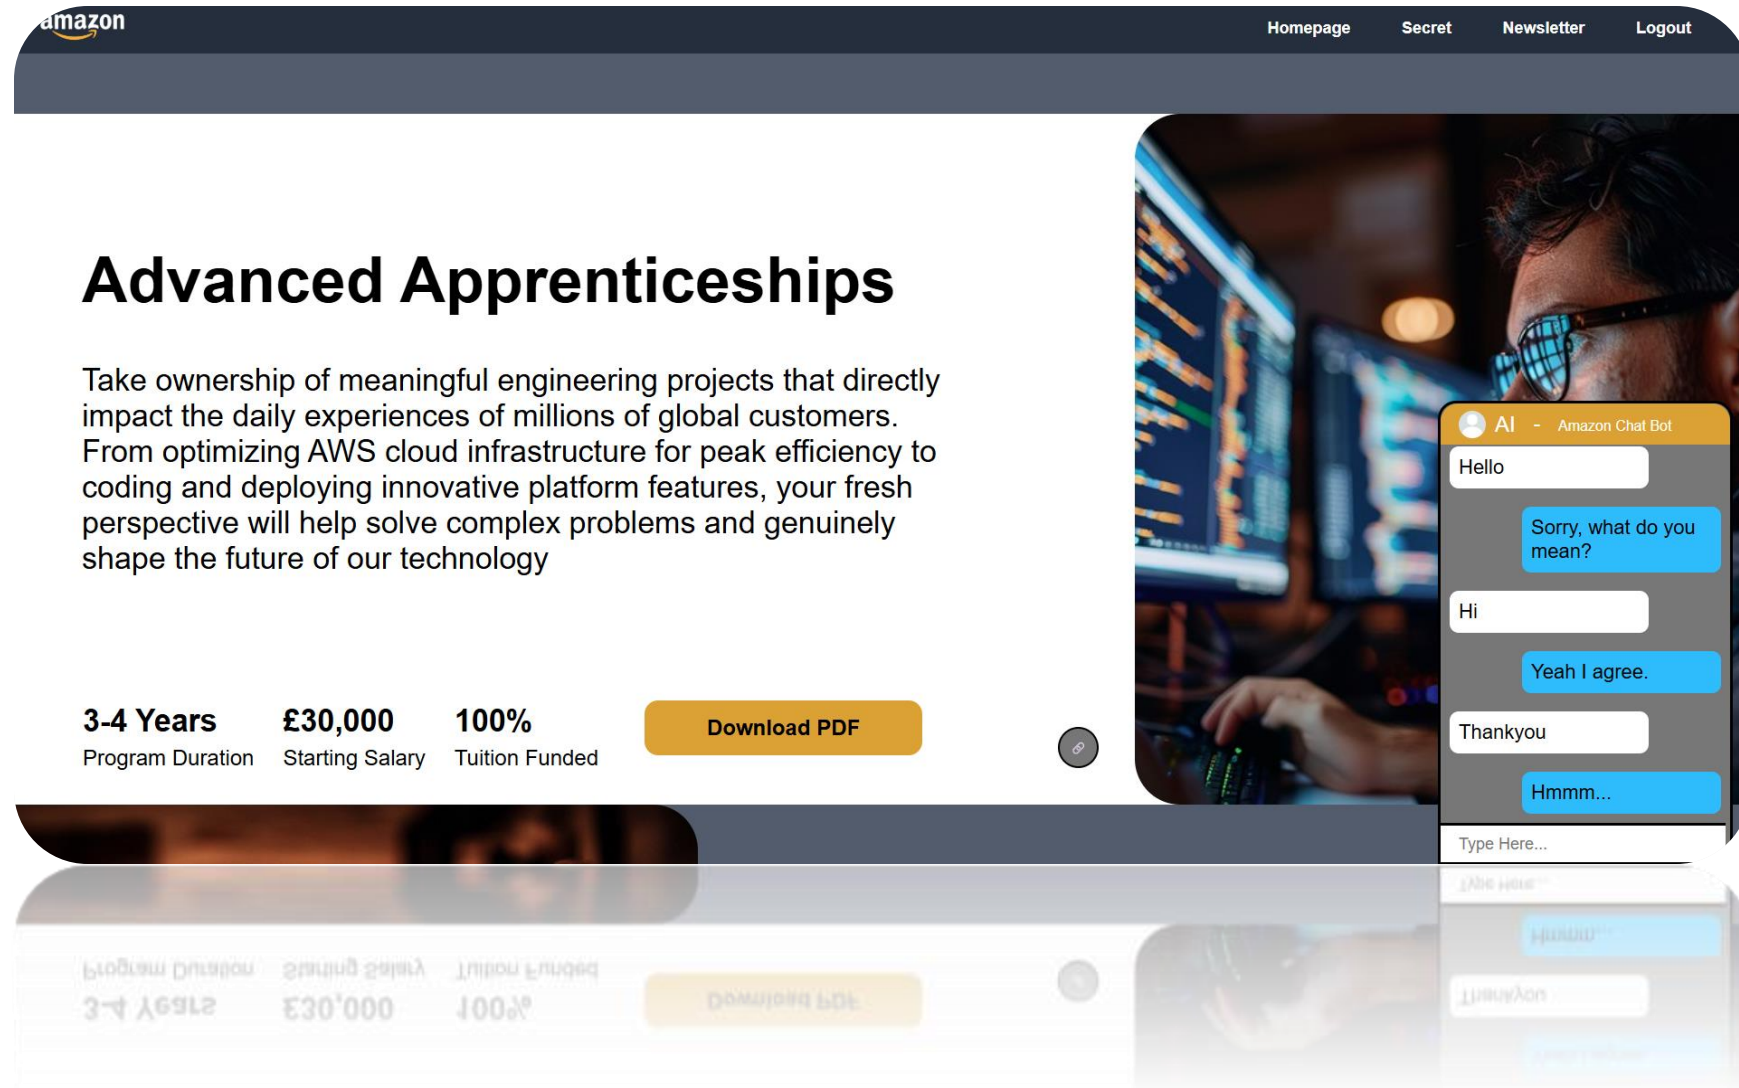

PROBLEM STATEMENT

We were tasked with creating a website to help provide the required information about T levels, and where T levels can lead your career within amazon. This is because there is currently a lack of information on the topic in an easy to find place for people considering T Levels.

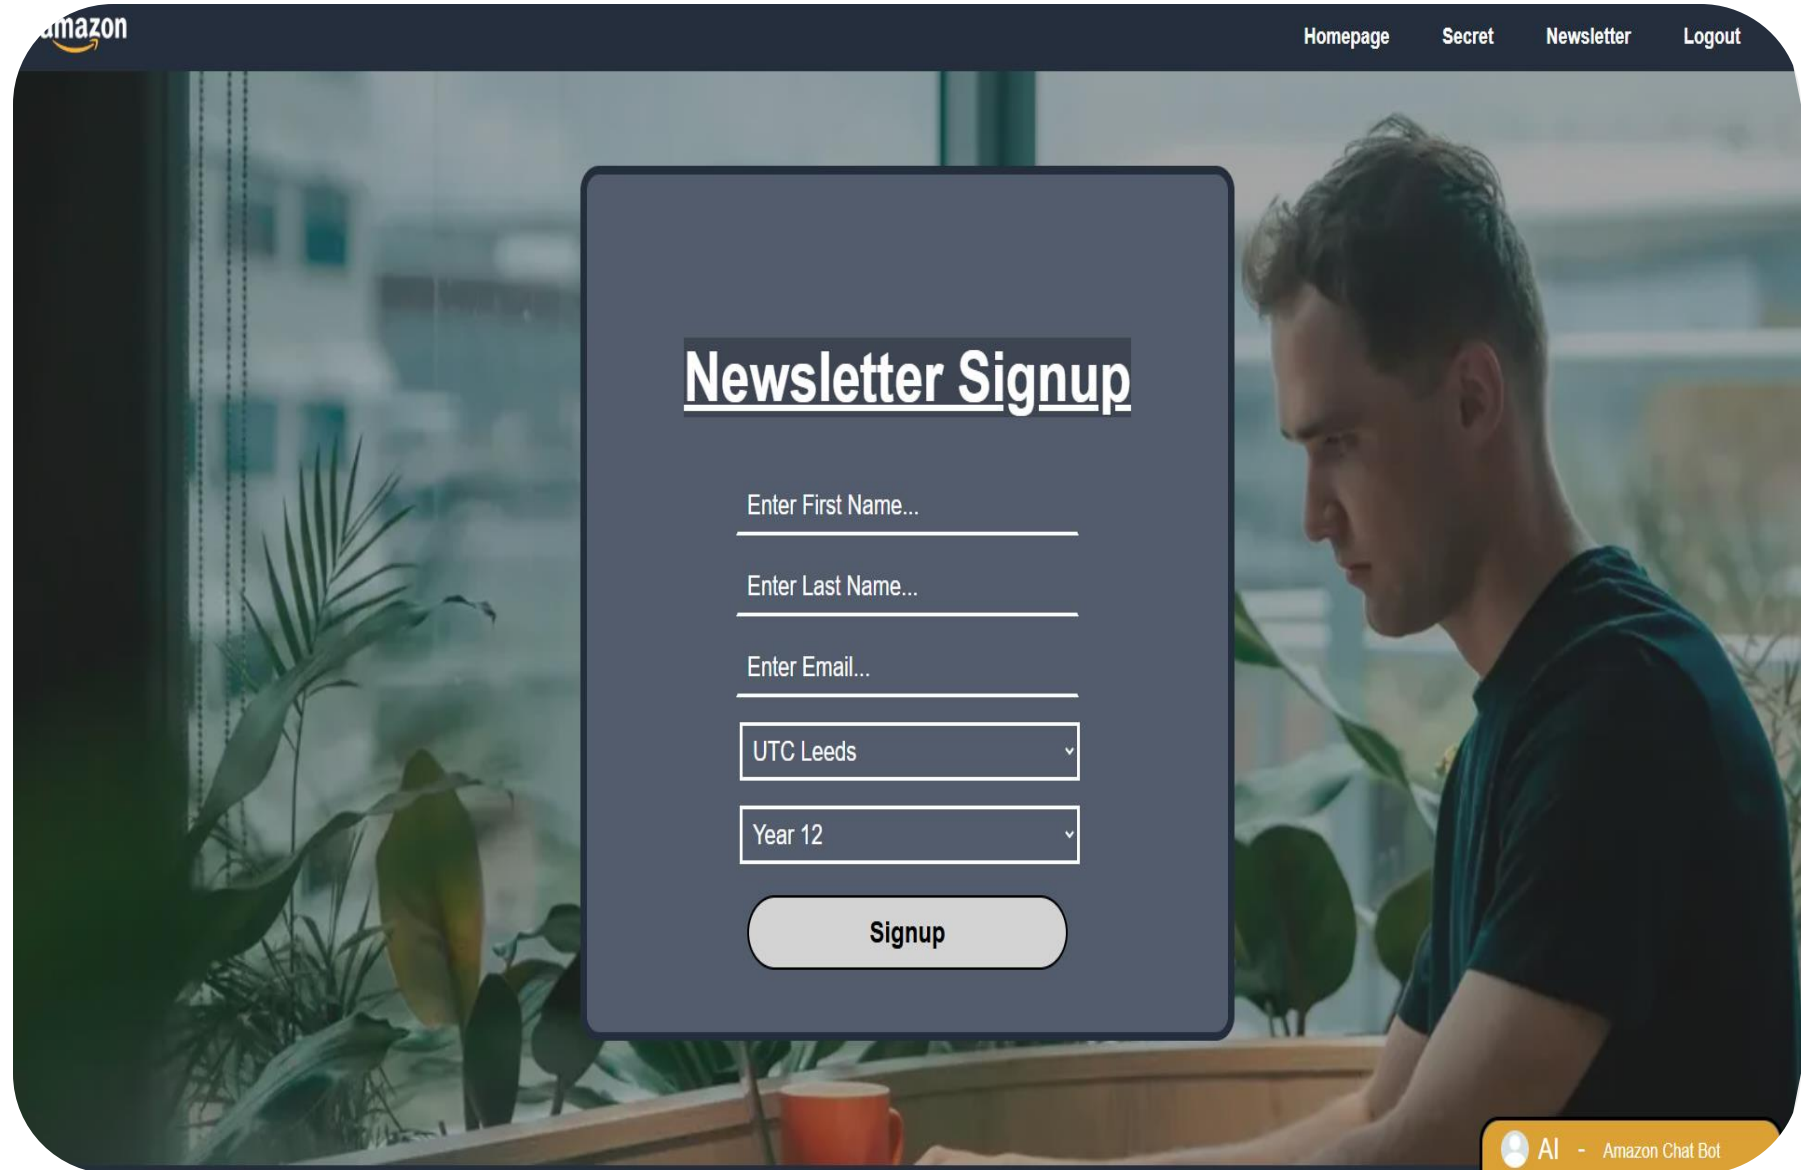

DESIGN

- Sleek minimalistic nav bar
- Modern Design
- Helpful chatbot
- Cleanly integrated buttons
- Helpful stats
- Obvious Sections

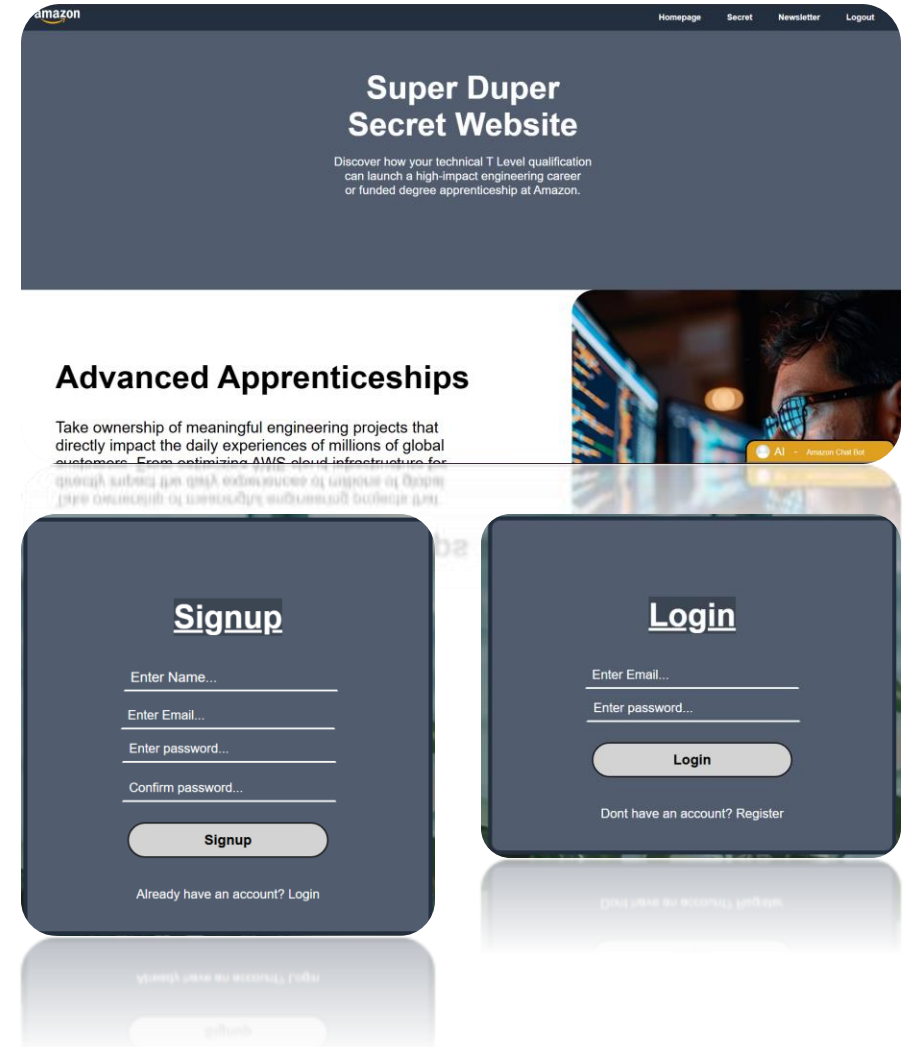

DESIGN

- Clean UI
- Obvious main section
(makes it obvious where to focus)
- Auto updating dropdowns
- Reusable design for other forms

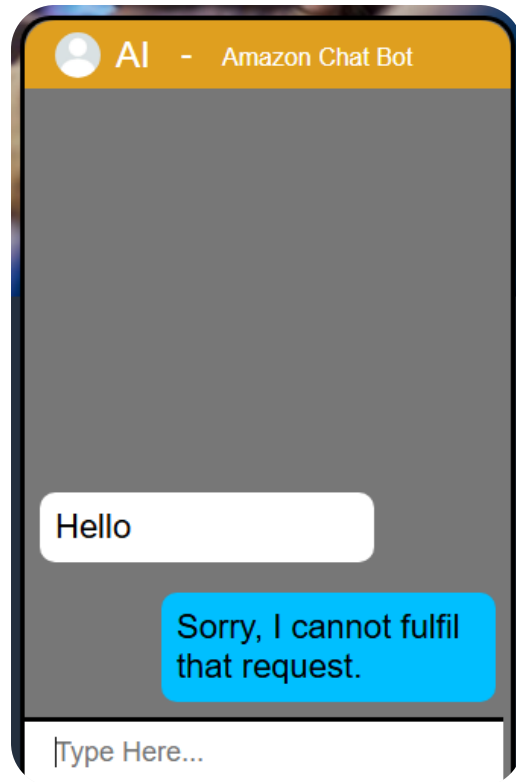

FUNCTIONALITY

- Working Login Function
- Working Register Function on same page
- Logout function when logged in
- Page accessible only when logged in

FUNCTIONALITY

A dark blue rounded rectangle representing a "Newsletter Signup" form. The title "Newsletter Signup" is in white, underlined text. Below the title are four input fields: "Enter First Name...", "Enter Last Name...", "Enter Email...", and a dropdown menu currently showing "UTC Leeds". Below these is another dropdown menu showing "Year 12". At the bottom is a grey button labeled "Signup".

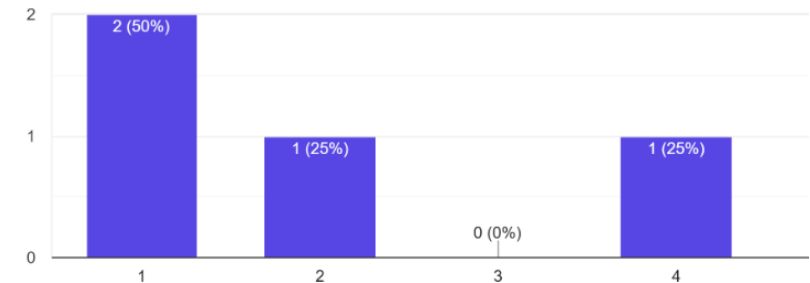

Interacts with the database to update and retrieve info (example the school dropdown is updated based on schools in the db)

Has an example chat bot that doesn't fully function

EVALUATION

- Essentially we need to severely work on the accessibility of the site, as also during testing we found that the images slide off the side of the screen when zooming in as seen below:

What would you rate the accessibility of the site?

What are T Levels?

T levels are a Level 3 qualification in the UK, they are somewhat of a compromise between BTEC's and A Levels. They have some exams similar to A Levels, However also some more practical work. They are however different as T Levels include 315 require of work experience
